International Counselling Conference 2017

Buenos Aires, Argentina

20-23 April 2017

How the Conference Works:

Each Day has a combination of Plenary (everyone together) and Breakout (individual group) sessions. Delegates choose a themed Working Group for the duration of the conference and attend that group each day at the Working Group times (mainly in the afternoon).

The schedule below indicates whether a session is P = Plenary or B = Breakout

Day 1: 20th April: Preconference Workshops (B - Daytime) & Opening Ceremony incl. Keynote (P - Evening)

Day 2: 21st April: Keynote (P), Roundtable (P), Workshops (B), Roundtables (B - choice of 2)

Day 3: 22nd April: Keynote (P), Roundtable (P), Workshops (B), Roundtables (P - choice of 2), Gala Dinner (Optional – must be booked)

Day 4: 23rd April: Keynote (P), Roundtable (P), Workshops (B), Closing Ceremony (P), "Agape" Celebratory Meal (P – included for all attendees).

PRE-CONFERENCE WORKSHOPS: These will be held on Thursday the 20th of April - during the day of the conference opening ceremony (which takes place in the evening). They include a variety of topics and are designed to offer participants the opportunity to work individually and/or in groups. Practitioners can gain practical counselling advice and skills as well as continuing professional development experience.

IAC Working Groups: Working Groups are at the heart of the conference and provide opportunities for ongoing contact between participants throughout the event. Participants select a Working Group at the beginning of the conference and stay with that group, for the most part, for the duration of the conference. Working groups meet each day of the conference through a series of sessions scheduled on the programme. The Working Groups enable participants to present their work, such as theoretical, empirical or practical studies. The rationale behind these groups is that participants not only have the opportunity to present their papers, but to meet other people from a wide range of cultures and countries. The provision of these fora compliments the IAC peace and social justice goals by generating sincere, extended, dialogue and understanding between people and cultures.

Group 1 – Domestic Violence – Its impact on women and societies generally

Group 2 – Counselling in Education

Group 3 – Counselling Changing Families

Group 4 – Counselling and Poverty

Group 5 – Counselling and Substance Abuse

Group 6 – Counselling in the face of Profound Loss

Group 7 – Counselling as a Profession in South America (incl. Challenges in Career Counselling)

IAC ROUND TABLES

Hans Hoxter
IRTAC/IAC Founder

IAC ROUND TABLES

The International Association for Counselling (IAC) was born as the International Round Table for the Advancement of Counselling (IRTAC) in 1966. The concept of a round table for counselling was the brainchild of IAC's legendary founder and visionary Hans Hoxter. Hoxter had started working in favour of counselling as a force for peace and human wellbeing in the immediate aftermath of the Second World War and when IRTAC was founded it gave a voice to all those counsellors and associations around the world, who needed to meet, share and discuss with international colleagues. The IAC round table concept presents us with scenarios where all counsellors and counselling associations irrespective of any kind of difference have equal opportunities to present, explain, understand and be heard and be understood. It is very important to underline that IAC is not interested in becoming a heavy dominator of counselling politics around the world. IAC is interested in becoming a vehicle for understanding, solidarity and opportunities for counsellors and their associations.

Current IAC Round Tables:

- Associations' Round Table
- Ethics Round Table
- Indigenous Round Table
- Projects Round Table
- A Students and Young Counsellors Round Table
- Practitioners' Roundtable
- International Research Round Table
- Peace and Social Justice Round Table
