Reviewing Previous Follow-up Items

• Increasing representation on the CPRT across the regions
  o The group discussed exploring opportunities to recruit individuals by inviting colleagues to become interested o The group discussed ways that IAC could create more visibility:
    ▪ The CPRT discussed having IAC meetings or receptions at regional conferences, such as ACA or otherwise. This could begin at the upcoming ACA conference in Atlanta, USA.
    ▪ Explore the potential for IAC to offer the MHF training through NBCC-I as a pre-conference for the 2019 IAC conference. Nate could provide this training as an MHF Master trainer.
    ▪ Continue to participate in other international counseling venues and discuss IAC further in these settings. The International Counseling Interest Network (ICIN) was described as a helpful place to begin.

  o Members can continue to bring more attention to other associations, as Sandy mentioned one of the goals of the ACA international committee is to branch out

• Current research activities:
  o Beatriz reported the upcoming research occurring through IAC to map local and regional associations; she also shared about another study with an Executive Council member exploring the integration of different cultures on immigration
  o Nate described a current qualitative research study exploring the phenomenon of how counseling values intersect with cultural values across the eight regions represented at IAC.

Current topics in counseling

• Refugee/ Immigrant populations: There seems to be increased attention on social justice issues for those who are immigrants fearing deportation
• Participants discussed clinical services being offered regarding immigrant populations
• Counseling issues in The Netherlands are highlighting the need to recognize the resentment among people angry about the economic impact of refugees. There was discussion related to how counselors must be prepared to support both the refugee population, and those that are upset with their presence in the country.
• Discussion related to how counselors can be involved in advocacy for supporting the needs of people from any perspective, refugee or not. Political issues continue to impact the need and support for counseling in general.

CPRT Recommendations & Follow-up Items
• The CPRT concluded on recommendations for the Executive Council to consider ways to facilitate IAC meetings at regional conferences. Because several participants are attending the ACA conference in Atlanta, George, USA in April 2018, there will be efforts to setup a time to meet. Future receptions or meetings could be established in order to facilitate increased activity and visibility. The CPRT would be willing to start piloting some meetings at upcoming conferences.
• The CPRT recommended that the Executive Council consider having training, certification, or registration opportunities for pre-conference workshops in future IAC meetings. Nate offered the possibility to offer the training for Mental Health Facilitator (MHF) trainers through the National Board for Certified Counselors-International (NBCC-I).
